

GIRL IN KHAKI COMES TO BOOST RECRUITING

Miss in Uniform—Trousers and All—Will Aid Enlistments.

She's only a slip of a girl, of medium stature, with blue eyes. She wears a smart khaki uniform—without the campaign hat, which doesn't fit quite snugly enough to prevent several wisps of brown hair from coming plainly into view.

She's only a slip of a girl, but she is "doing her bit" for her country in a manner which should make recruiting sergeants sit up and take notice. For this little girl has won over sixty men to enlist in the army or the navy. She is in Washington today, about to begin her recruiting campaign here.

Miss Dora Rodriguez was born in Cincinnati not so many summers ago, and during her life she's done quite a few things. She was for a good while a "movie" actress she has traveled all over this country and abroad, and she has lectured.

She Tried to Enlist. So when the war between Germany and the United States became a grim reality, and Miss Dora read in the papers that yeoman were needed in Uncle Sam's navy, she hied to the nearest recruiting station, which happened to be in New York, with the purpose of enlisting in the navy.

But the recruiting sergeant told Miss Dora yeomen were stenographers, and that what the navy and army wanted were people who could talk other people into enlisting.

"I just believe I can do that little thing," said Miss Dora to herself, and so she went to Philadelphia. And there a suggestion was made to her. It was to get a reel or two of moving pictures which showed life in the army and navy, show them herself, and after showing them plead with the men to enlist and serve their country.

Will Start Rally Here. Miss Dora pleaded with a movie owner for a day and in the end he allowed her to have two reels, showing actual life in the army and navy, and as soon as she gets a chance, she is going to start a rally here.

Miss Dora walks—doesn't ride—from city to city. She comes walking into a rural village, dressed in her khaki uniform—including the trousers—and while the farmers gape, she tells them in a voice which makes them sit up and take notice that the country doesn't want them in the army, but on the farm. And somehow they believe her.

Washington is to witness this modern little Joan of Arc soon—she promises to be in New York, at the recruiting stations for a while.

HONOR MANILA BAY HERO Navy Department Officials Pay Visit To Mrs. Dewey.

In commemoration of the nineteenth anniversary of the victory of Manila Bay, Secretary of the Navy Daniels and members of the general board of the navy today called on Mrs. George Dewey, widow of the late admiral of the navy, whose achievements that May day won for him imperishable fame.

The Secretary and his chief naval advisers made their call on Mrs. Dewey today at the time when the fleet again are mobilized for war.

Secretary Daniels pointed out afterward that the campaign to recruit the navy to war strength by Dewey day had been successful. May 1, 1900, when Dewey won his historic victory, there were 22,828 men in the navy. The year following this number had dropped to 14,500. Today the total enlisted strength of the navy is 30,000, an increase of 64,495 men. The increase in April was 20,000 men, the greatest single month's recruiting.
